THE HICKMAN COURIER.

PUBLISHED EVERY FRIDAY

—BY—

GEORGE WARREN,

HICKMAN, KY.

Office—Home Building, Clinton Street.

GEORGE WARREN, Editor.

PRICE OF SUBSCRIPTION, $1.50.

THE HICKMAN COURIER.

The Oldest Newspaper in Western Kentucky.

ESTABLISHED 1859. HICKMAN, FULTON COUNTY, KENTUCKY, FRIDAY, JANUARY 23, 1885. VOL. XX.—NO. 16.

Fine Job Printing

—EXECUTED—

With Neatness and Dispatch.

SALE BILLS, LETTER-HEADS, ENVELOPES, BILL-HEADS, INVITATIONS, ETC., ETC.

CALL AND SEE US.

GIVEN AND TAKEN.

Smoothing soft the nestling heat
Till a maiden fancy-fed,
Thinks the graveyard woman said:

"Richest gifts are those we make,
Deep than the love we take
That we give for love's own sake.

"Well I know the heart's unrest;
Mine has been the common quest
To be loved and cherished."

"Favors undeserved were mine:
All my feet as on a shrine
Love has laid its gifts of wine.

"Sweet the offerings seemed, and yet
With their sweetness came regret,
And a sense of unmeet debt.

"Heart of mine unsatisfied,
Was it vanity or pride
That a deeper joy denied?

"Hands that one but to receive,
Empty since, they seem to grieve
Who can richly give.

"Lips that only know to kiss
Ripe with honey, dare not crave,
Fitted-be to Him who gave
Life itself the power to save.

"Love that self-forgetful gives
Sows surprise of ripened sheaves,
Late or soon its own it reaps."
—John Greenleaf Whittier, N. Y. Independent.

According to Mr. Whittier's theory, a man is getting his deserts when he is getting married.

A SINGULAR STORY.

Marriage, Murder, Desertion and Miraculous Detection.

A Hint in Male Attire Crosses the Ocean to Find Father—Accident at Her Mission—A Romance in Real Life.

Perhaps the most romantic and startling story of facts that have ever come to light in Iowa was related to your correspondent to-day, and which is certainly unknown to the citizens of Dubuque. My informant is one of the oldest and most influential citizens of this city. In answer to the well-known reporter's query, "What's new?" he said: "I have a long and interesting story to tell you, and you will be the first newspaper man to whom it has ever been told by me." Leaving back in his enclosed chair and placing his feet on an old-fashioned looking desk, he told the following story: Away back in the early days of Dubuque a family, consisting of man and wife and one daughter, came here from St. Louis. Their names will be withheld for the present, but may be given later. The husband and father engaged in the business of a miner, and for a time was quite successful. He was a well-educated, well-dressed, well-spoken gentleman and cultivation in youth. He was a Frenchman. After a while he had what little money he had in the mining business, but became almost destitute. Dubuque in those days was a hard place to circumvent, built mainly of frame shanties and populated for the most part by lawless. He, without any prospects of making a living for himself and family, set to work, heartbroken and disheartened, of which was his being found dangling from a rope in his own room, cold in death. He had committed suicide. His poor widow and orphan girl were prostrated with grief; the former fainted at the sight of her child and remained in a comatose condition for more than two days, at the end of which time preparations were completed for the interment of the supposed dead body. It was even inclosed in a casket, when the startling discovery was made that the person was only in a swoon. It is needless to say that the supposed lifeless form was immediately removed, and such restoratives as were considered were quickly administered by willing hands. She rapidly recovered, and was soon in her former state of health, but, as I have said, was placed in a very destitute condition, and how to eke out a living for herself and child eluded much to her shallow brain. Finally she obtained a situation as "maid of all work." In addition to this she taught her child how to read, write and spell, and rolled up and the child grew to be a young lady, earning her own living. Dubuque was at this time rapidly growing. Immigrants poured in from all directions, enlarging Dubuque to quite a village.

Among the new arrivals was a boy who emigrated from Europe at the age of eighteen to seek a livelihood in the great West. He possessed a remarkable ambition to rise in the world. He commenced on a starvation salary, and was afterward employed in a little grocery store, where he soon became a partner in the business. About this time he met and fell in love with the young lady I have just referred to. Though poorly clad she was comparatively pretty and quite intelligent. This brief portraiture was the only an introduction to a long and charming friendship which followed, a description of which is unnecessary, as the reader will say it did not deviate much from the "rules" in use at the present time. It was not a fortnight's duration before they were, as the average play does, in a happy marriage, though this happiness, it must be said, was short-lived. Scarcely had swiftly passed the mother-in-law during this time died—and three bright little children had come to bless the union—and nothing happened to mar the joys and one a girl. When the youngest was only three months old the father became engaged in a quarrel with his partner in business, during which he, unintentionally, it is said, dealt him a blow on the forehead, wounding him in such a manner as to cause his death in a few weeks after. He was held for trial for murder—the trial lasting fourteen days—and convicted of manslaughter and was accordingly sentenced to life imprisonment at hard labor. This was a terrible blow to the wife and child and mother, and for a time fears of her becoming insane were entertained, but she braved the billow and was again soon landed safe on the shores of good health. The imprisoned life was soon changed to a free one. The wife and child death struggle he succeeded in releasing himself from the prison walls. His escape was not described in glowing terms, and his whereabouts was unknown. A diligent search was kept up for some time, but no trace of him could be found. We will follow him, however. Immediately after his escape he proceeded to New York, where he took passage for Dublin, and arrived there five weeks later, this being the same it took in those days to sail across the Atlantic. His arrival was greeted warmly by his many friends and relations, as they were completely ignorant of his past career. Communication with his wife and family was entirely cut off, as such action might possibly lead to his discovery and capture. We next find him employed in an extensive linen factory on Sackville street, holding the responsible position of foreman of the entire establishment. His integrity, ambition of furthering his employer's business interests and honesty in discharge of his duties in that position gained for him the confidence of his employers, and he was soon made general manager of the concern at an enormous salary. The announcement of his marriage to the daughter of the senior member of the firm in question created quite a sensation, as they were, socially speaking, about equal to each other, she being of very high social standing in the metropolis of the country little island, while on the other hand he was comparatively ignorant and obscure in local position. This was the primary. If not the principal cause of frequent quarrels thereafter. Time passed, and two children were born to them.

We will now take a trip back to his former home in America, wife and children from whom he was forced to part several years previous. After his escape from prison the wife rapidly [illegible] the husband and wife, which resulted in her emigration to the city of Dublin, where a few years of happy life were spent, when the husband died, and was shortly afterward followed to the shores of the unknown beyond by our hero. At the time of the death he was immensely rich, and willed a handsome fortune to our little heroine (his daughter), also half of his business. In his son who had the means of bringing about the happy end. So the son's loss he has never been heard of since. Should he be in existence still this little communication we hope will be the agent to establish some one to his whereabouts, and convey to him the news of his good luck.

Of the arranged woman and her two daughters we have nothing to tell, for the reason that their lives from the time of their first sight of them here are entirely unknown to our informant, and as to the heroine, she is living that happiest of all happy lives, that of a wife and mother, and children. The expiration of several years of supposed widowhood the heroine of this tale left the devoted wife and children. The expiration of several years of supposed widowhood the heroine of this tale left the devoted wife and children. The great mystery and an awful tale.

On a cold December evening a tattered but intelligent looking little [illegible] of white, giving, dressed in male attire, presented himself at the door of her residence and politely asked for some employment that he was on a long, fatiguing journey, and without money. The request was [illegible] and after [illegible] thanking her for her kindness and telling where he was from he took his leave. No name was heard of him or seen of him there.

The summer of 18— witnessed a great many exceptional events in this [illegible] from all quarters. Among the large number aboard was the boy who had appeared in Dubuque as mentioned, who had now grown to respectable manhood under the rays of a Southern sun. As fate would have it, the grocer-ess of the [illegible] was also a passenger on the same steamer which [illegible] was bound to him. Their names will be withheld for the present, but may be given later. The husband and father engaged in the business of a miner, and for a time was quite successful. He was a well-educated, well-dressed, well-spoken gentleman and cultivation in youth. He was a Frenchman. After a while he had what little money he had in the mining business, but became almost destitute. Dubuque in those days was a hard place to circumvent, built mainly of frame shanties and populated for the most part by lawless. He, without any prospects of making a living for himself and family, set to work, heartbroken and disheartened, of which was his being found dangling from a rope in his own room, cold in death. He had committed suicide. His poor widow and orphan girl were prostrated with grief; the former fainted at the sight of her child and remained in a comatose condition for more than two days, at the end of which time preparations were completed for the interment of the supposed dead body. It was even inclosed in a casket, when the startling discovery was made that the person was only in a swoon. It is needless to say that the supposed lifeless form was immediately removed, and such restoratives as were considered were quickly administered by willing hands. She rapidly recovered, and was soon in her former state of health, but, as I have said, was placed in a very destitute condition, and how to eke out a living for herself and child eluded much to her shallow brain. Finally she obtained a situation as "maid of all work." In addition to this she taught her child how to read, write and spell, and rolled up and the child grew to be a young lady, earning her own living. Dubuque was at this time rapidly growing. Immigrants poured in from all directions, enlarging Dubuque to quite a village.

Among the new arrivals was a boy who emigrated from Europe at the age of eighteen to seek a livelihood in the great West. He possessed a remarkable ambition to rise in the world. He commenced on a starvation salary, and was afterward employed in a little grocery store, where he soon became a partner in the business. About this time he met and fell in love with the young lady I have just referred to. Though poorly clad she was comparatively pretty and quite intelligent. This brief portraiture was the only an introduction to a long and charming friendship which followed, a description of which is unnecessary, as the reader will say it did not deviate much from the "rules" in use at the present time. It was not a fortnight's duration before they were, as the average play does, in a happy marriage, though this happiness, it must be said, was short-lived. Scarcely had swiftly passed the mother-in-law during this time died—and three bright little children had come to bless the union—and nothing happened to mar the joys and one a girl. When the youngest was only three months old the father became engaged in a quarrel with his partner in business, during which he, unintentionally, it is said, dealt him a blow on the forehead, wounding him in such a manner as to cause his death in a few weeks after. He was held for trial for murder—the trial lasting fourteen days—and convicted of manslaughter and was accordingly sentenced to life imprisonment at hard labor. This was a terrible blow to the wife and child and mother, and for a time fears of her becoming insane were entertained, but she braved the billow and was again soon landed safe on the shores of good health. The imprisoned life was soon changed to a free one. The wife and child death struggle he succeeded in releasing himself from the prison walls. His escape was not described in glowing terms, and his whereabouts was unknown. A diligent search was kept up for some time, but no trace of him could be found. We will follow him, however. Immediately after his escape he proceeded to New York, where he took passage for Dublin, and arrived there five weeks later, this being the same it took in those days to sail across the Atlantic. His arrival was greeted warmly by his many friends and relations, as they were completely ignorant of his past career. Communication with his wife and family was entirely cut off, as such action might possibly lead to his discovery and capture. We next find him employed in an extensive linen factory on Sackville street, holding the responsible position of foreman of the entire establishment. His integrity, ambition of furthering his employer's business interests and honesty in discharge of his duties in that position gained for him the confidence of his employers, and he was soon made general manager of the concern at an enormous salary. The announcement of his marriage to the daughter of the senior member of the firm in question created quite a sensation, as they were, socially speaking, about equal to each other, she being of very high social standing in the metropolis of the country little island, while on the other hand he was comparatively ignorant and obscure in local position. This was the primary. If not the principal cause of frequent quarrels thereafter. Time passed, and two children were born to them.

We will now take a trip back to his former home in America, wife and children from whom he was forced to part several years previous. After his escape from prison the wife rapidly [illegible] the husband and wife, which resulted in her emigration to the city of Dublin, where a few years of happy life were spent, when the husband died, and was shortly afterward followed to the shores of the unknown beyond by our hero. At the time of the death he was immensely rich, and willed a handsome fortune to our little heroine (his daughter), also half of his business. In his son who was the means of bringing about the happy end. So the son's loss he has never been heard of since. Should he be in existence still this little communication we hope will be the agent to establish some one to his whereabouts, and convey to him the news of his good luck.

Of the arranged woman and her two daughters we have nothing to tell, for the reason that their lives from the time of their first sight of them here are entirely unknown to our informant, and as to the heroine, she is living that happiest of all happy lives, that of a wife and mother, and children. The expiration of several years of supposed widowhood the heroine of this tale left the devoted wife and children. The great mystery and an awful tale.

On a cold December evening a tattered but intelligent looking little [illegible] of white, giving, dressed in male attire, presented himself at the door of her residence and politely asked for some employment that he was on a long, fatiguing journey, and without money. The request was [illegible] and after [illegible] thanking her for her kindness and telling where he was from he took his leave. No name was heard of him or seen of him there.

The summer of 18— witnessed a great many exceptional events in this [illegible] from all quarters. Among the large number aboard was the boy who had appeared in Dubuque as mentioned, who had now grown to respectable manhood under the rays of a Southern sun. As fate would have it, the grocer-ess of the [illegible] was also a passenger on the same steamer which [illegible] was bound to him. Their names will be withheld for the present, but may be given later. The husband and father engaged in the business of a miner, and for a time was quite successful. He was a well-educated, well-dressed, well-spoken gentleman and cultivation in youth. He was a Frenchman. After a while he had what little money he had in the mining business, but became almost destitute. Dubuque in those days was a hard place to circumvent, built mainly of frame shanties and populated for the most part by lawless. He, without any prospects of making a living for himself and family, set to work, heartbroken and disheartened, of which was his being found dangling from a rope in his own room, cold in death. He had committed suicide. His poor widow and orphan girl were prostrated with grief; the former fainted at the sight of her child and remained in a comatose condition for more than two days, at the end of which time preparations were completed for the interment of the supposed dead body. It was even inclosed in a casket, when the startling discovery was made that the person was only in a swoon. It is needless to say that the supposed lifeless form was immediately removed, and such restoratives as were considered were quickly administered by willing hands. She rapidly recovered, and was soon in her former state of health, but, as I have said, was placed in a very destitute condition, and how to eke out a living for herself and child eluded much to her shallow brain. Finally she obtained a situation as "maid of all work." In addition to this she taught her child how to read, write and spell, and rolled up and the child grew to be a young lady, earning her own living. Dubuque was at this time rapidly growing. Immigrants poured in from all directions, enlarging Dubuque to quite a village.

Among the new arrivals was a boy who emigrated from Europe at the age of eighteen to seek a livelihood in the great West. He possessed a remarkable ambition to rise in the world. He commenced on a starvation salary, and was afterward employed in a little grocery store, where he soon became a partner in the business. About this time he met and fell in love with the young lady I have just referred to. Though poorly clad she was comparatively pretty and quite intelligent. This brief portraiture was the only an introduction to a long and charming friendship which followed, a description of which is unnecessary, as the reader will say it did not deviate much from the "rules" in use at the present time. It was not a fortnight's duration before they were, as the average play does, in a happy marriage, though this happiness, it must be said, was short-lived. Scarcely had swiftly passed the mother-in-law during this time died—and three bright little children had come to bless the union—and nothing happened to mar the joys and one a girl. When the youngest was only three months old the father became engaged in a quarrel with his partner in business, during which he, unintentionally, it is said, dealt him a blow on the forehead, wounding him in such a manner as to cause his death in a few weeks after. He was held for trial for murder—the trial lasting fourteen days—and convicted of manslaughter and was accordingly sentenced to life imprisonment at hard labor. This was a terrible blow to the wife and child and mother, and for a time fears of her becoming insane were entertained, but she braved the billow and was again soon landed safe on the shores of good health. The imprisoned life was soon changed to a free one. The wife and child death struggle he succeeded in releasing himself from the prison walls. His escape was not described in glowing terms, and his whereabouts was unknown. A diligent search was kept up for some time, but no trace of him could be found. We will follow him, however. Immediately after his escape he proceeded to New York, where he took passage for Dublin, and arrived there five weeks later, this being the same it took in those days to sail across the Atlantic. His arrival was greeted warmly by his many friends and relations, as they were completely ignorant of his past career. Communication with his wife and family was entirely cut off, as such action might possibly lead to his discovery and capture. We next find him employed in an extensive linen factory on Sackville street, holding the responsible position of foreman of the entire establishment. His integrity, ambition of furthering his employer's business interests and honesty in discharge of his duties in that position gained for him the confidence of his employers, and he was soon made general manager of the concern at an enormous salary. The announcement of his marriage to the daughter of the senior member of the firm in question created quite a sensation, as they were, socially speaking, about equal to each other, she being of very high social standing in the metropolis of the country little island, while on the other hand he was comparatively ignorant and obscure in local position. This was the primary. If not the principal cause of frequent quarrels thereafter. Time passed, and two children were born to them.

We will now take a trip back to his former home in America, wife and children from whom he was forced to part several years previous. After his escape from prison the wife rapidly [illegible] the husband and wife, which resulted in her emigration to the city of Dublin, where a few years of happy life were spent, when the husband died, and was shortly afterward followed to the shores of the unknown beyond by our hero. At the time of the death he was immensely rich, and willed a handsome fortune to our little heroine (his daughter), also half of his business. In his son who was the means of bringing about the happy end. So the son's loss he has never been heard of since. Should he be in existence still this little communication we hope will be the agent to establish some one to his whereabouts, and convey to him the news of his good luck.

Of the arranged woman and her two daughters we have nothing to tell, for the reason that their lives from the time of their first sight of them here are entirely unknown to our informant, and as to the heroine, she is living that happiest of all happy lives, that of a wife and mother, and children. The expiration of several years of supposed widowhood the heroine of this tale left the devoted wife and children. The great mystery and an awful tale.

On a cold December evening a tattered but intelligent looking little [illegible] of white, giving, dressed in male attire, presented himself at the door of her residence and politely asked for some employment that he was on a long, fatiguing journey, and without money. The request was [illegible] and after [illegible] thanking her for her kindness and telling where he was from he took his leave. No name was heard of him or seen of him there.

The summer of 18— witnessed a great many exceptional events in this [illegible] from all quarters. Among the large number aboard was the boy who had appeared in Dubuque as mentioned, who had now grown to respectable manhood under the rays of a Southern sun. As fate would have it, the grocer-ess of the [illegible] was also a passenger on the same steamer which [illegible] was bound to him. Their names will be withheld for the present, but may be given later. The husband and father engaged in the business of a miner, and for a time was quite successful. He was a well-educated, well-dressed, well-spoken gentleman and cultivation in youth. He was a Frenchman. After a while he had what little money he had in the mining business, but became almost destitute. Dubuque in those days was a hard place to circumvent, built mainly of frame shanties and populated for the most part by lawless. He, without any prospects of making a living for himself and family, set to work, heartbroken and disheartened, of which was his being found dangling from a rope in his own room, cold in death. He had committed suicide. His poor widow and orphan girl were prostrated with grief; the former fainted at the sight of her child and remained in a comatose condition for more than two days, at the end of which time preparations were completed for the interment of the supposed dead body. It was even inclosed in a casket, when the startling discovery was made that the person was only in a swoon. It is needless to say that the supposed lifeless form was immediately removed, and such restoratives as were considered were quickly administered by willing hands. She rapidly recovered, and was soon in her former state of health, but, as I have said, was placed in a very destitute condition, and how to eke out a living for herself and child eluded much to her shallow brain. Finally she obtained a situation as "maid of all work." In addition to this she taught her child how to read, write and spell, and rolled up and the child grew to be a young lady, earning her own living. Dubuque was at this time rapidly growing. Immigrants poured in from all directions, enlarging Dubuque to quite a village.

Among the new arrivals was a boy who emigrated from Europe at the age of eighteen to seek a livelihood in the great West. He possessed a remarkable ambition to rise in the world. He commenced on a starvation salary, and was afterward employed in a little grocery store, where he soon became a partner in the business. About this time he met and fell in love with the young lady I have just referred to. Though poorly clad she was comparatively pretty and quite intelligent. This brief portraiture was the only an introduction to a long and charming friendship which followed, a description of which is unnecessary, as the reader will say it did not deviate much from the "rules" in use at the present time. It was not a fortnight's duration before they were, as the average play does, in a happy marriage, though this happiness, it must be said, was short-lived. Scarcely had swiftly passed the mother-in-law during this time died—and three bright little children had come to bless the union—and nothing happened to mar the joys and one a girl. When the youngest was only three months old the father became engaged in a quarrel with his partner in business, during which he, unintentionally, it is said, dealt him a blow on the forehead, wounding him in such a manner as to cause his death in a few weeks after. He was held for trial for murder—the trial lasting fourteen days—and convicted of manslaughter and was accordingly sentenced to life imprisonment at hard labor. This was a terrible blow to the wife and child and mother, and for a time fears of her becoming insane were entertained, but she braved the billow and was again soon landed safe on the shores of good health. The imprisoned life was soon changed to a free one. The wife and child death struggle he succeeded in releasing himself from the prison walls. His escape was not described in glowing terms, and his whereabouts was unknown. A diligent search was kept up for some time, but no trace of him could be found. We will follow him, however. Immediately after his escape he proceeded to New York, where he took passage for Dublin, and arrived there five weeks later, this being the same it took in those days to sail across the Atlantic. His arrival was greeted warmly by his many friends and relations, as they were completely ignorant of his past career. Communication with his wife and family was entirely cut off, as such action might possibly lead to his discovery and capture. We next find him employed in an extensive linen factory on Sackville street, holding the responsible position of foreman of the entire establishment. His integrity, ambition of furthering his employer's business interests and honesty in discharge of his duties in that po-

"LOVE, HONOR AND OBEY."

Iowa Facts Concerning the Question of Wifely Obedience.

A young woman of eighteen who married a man of forty the other day in a Newark church crooked her finger during the ceremony so that the groom—contrary to his former actions—could [illegible] the little engagement ring over the second joint. Upon being asked during the reception that followed as to the cause of the hitch in the proceedings she replied that a friend had explained that she made a mental reservation in repeating the promise to love, honor and obey, and had also kept the ring from going over to give evidence she had heard that if it was stopped at the second joint the wife would be able to rule the husband, while if it went to the hand the husband would be supreme.

The superstition about crooking the finger is not very generally known, and the ring almost always goes clear down, but there is reason to believe that the [illegible] is very widely spread, and that obedience is common enough. In fact, the notion that the modern woman has come down with the marriage formula. The same equalizing spirit that has so modified woman's station as to abolish the old notion that a man and his wife are legally one person, and to enable her to hold and manage her own property, is independent of, and has modified the husband's control. As the husband can manage his business wiped out the idea of obedience as a thing to be rendered by the weaker estate of matrimony. Practically speaking, the woman rules fully as often as the man does, and strictly speaking, more absolutely in some cases than a man ever would think of doing.

Time was when for a reformatory disposition a man might lawfully correct his wife in a vigorous application of the birch. The punishment must in all cases be "reasonable," and it was held that he must not put into our young thicker than his thumb; but she could be reduced to submission by the man of the house, if frequent whippings would do it, not only without danger of punishment to the man, but with the possibility that he would be held up publicly also of all his wifely friends. If domestic discipline to those days proved insufficient he could by regular legal process of [illegible] her into court, where it was for offenses of speech rather than deed that the wife was eventually punished and [illegible] before the Magistrate and tried for a common scold, and if convicted was sent upon the public ducking-stool. This [illegible] was [illegible] used in a horse-pond or some convenient river.

It is perhaps to be regretted that no statistics are or can be kept showing the [illegible] of [illegible] consequence of quarrels between married people, for it would be interesting to know [illegible] information was obtained [illegible] on the average, matrimonial unions were happier and more peaceful when [illegible] was taken before the Magistrate [illegible] and [illegible] the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

The Hickman Courier.

GEORGE WARREN, Publisher.

HICKMAN. : : KENTUCKY.

VERY COMMON LAW.

One day an aged millionaire
Died most assuredly like
With mournful air his mournful heirs
They heaped hot wax by his will;
And severely acquiescent he
Despatched for Mr. Wright
To write the document, and then
Expired—that very night.

His kin, with shirts of wondrous size,
Remarked that life is brief;
And vied with one another in
Displaying vi sent grief.
And when the last sad rites were o'er,
With one accord they hied
To hear the document read
His pious testament.

The ready lawyer read aloud
The different bequests,
While various feelings swelled
Within the listeners' breasts,
And some resolved with sorry
To break that unjust will,
And some resolved with flint zeal
Its wishes to fulfill.

So those who held the will was right
Secured Lawyer Wright,
And those opposed, the service of
Mr. Bright gladly found;
And when the affair ended
Each found into legal writhe;
So lawyer shed their tears for death,
But left them flow for life.

To tell you how the quarrel grew
I will not even try,
The poetry of gros and cons
Is tedious and dry;
I know they argued high and low,
The usual oaths they swore,
And all the cases cited that
Were ever true before.

Time passed, and these contestants strove,
With still increasing rage,
Until their wealth had gone
To fill with endless disregard
A lot of their arguments,
Allowing plaintiffs no appeal,
Defendants no defense.

Also at last, the lawyers died,
And with a solemn face,
The undertaker prayed and
Like lawyers, laid by my case;
And thus I close my simple tale,
Which which I'd be content
Could I but tell—what no one knows—
Which of the money went.

Mrs. George Archbold, in Burlington Hawkeye.

AN OLD TROGLODYTE.

What Captain Mossley Discovered in His Search for Health.

While a party of men were waiting at a lonely station for a night train, Captain Jed Moseley was induced to tell a story. The station agent, after placing a signal lantern on the end of a cross-tie, had gone home. He had locked up the specific hot springs, but offer urgent solicitations he began, without knocking the dust from his pipe or refilling it, as the story-teller known in literature always does, but simply tossing an old letter post pipe to the man from whom he had borrowed it, he related, so far as the writer's recollection is unerring, the following:

Some time ago, when I was in the internal business service, my health gave way to such an extent that I was advised by a physician to relinquish all labor and seek a prolonged rest in the country. I had numerous invitations from friends living near the city, but I accepted none, having decided to visit some place far removed from the usual scenes of man. One day, after bidding the boys a hasty farewell, I mounted a horse and set out for the mountains. Old and rugged steps of the Boston Mountains, in Arkansas. The weather was charming. The October sun was not in the merest suggestion of summer warmth; the air was invigorating, the horizon purple with a soft haze and the woodland strains, covered with leaves of all hues, sparkled in the atmospheric splendor. I made on inquiries: asked not whither a road would lead me, but pursued my incidental gaze unchecked was.

Houses became scarce, and sometimes I was compelled to pass the night under a rock. I had brought with me a prospector's supply of food, and as my little pony stumbled about grass, neither I nor he nor my horse suffered.

I had observed, after traversing a narrow path that wound around among the mountains and suddenly became so steep that to pursue it further seemed impossible, I stopped, and, allowing my horse to graze, I lay down on an immense bowlder that had evidently fallen from some great height, and sank to sleep. I was awakened by music—a flute. Not a little possible. I mused, that anyone away up here is acquainted with the use of such a mellow-toned instrument. Yes, it is evidently a flute. I will look for the musician."

Leaving my horse, I climbed down, stepping from rock to rock, holding to saplings and swinging by vines, until I reached a little valley. The sounds of the flute, after I descended, were not quite so distinct as before, for I could now hear the noise of swiftly running water—not a fresh one, I fear, but a quiet glide of water, if I may use such a phrase. Turning a sharp edge of rock, I saw the musician sitting on a stump. Just below him a small river swept along, and back of him, I soon discovered, was a cave. As I neared him, he ceased playing, but did not arise. He was a very old man, with long white whiskers and long, snowy hair that fell on his shoulders.

"How are you, sir?" said I, though with bad grace, for I could not help but stare at him.

"As well as one of my age could expect to be," he replied.

"Do you live in this neighborhood?"

"I live in there," pointing toward the cave.

"Do you live alone?"

"Yes, and not any company."

"I do not mean to intrude upon you, but I am seeking quiet."

"And I am seeking quiet."

"I should not have known that you were here, sir, if you had not played."

"And if you had kept away from this place you would never have known but that I was again."

Here he took up his flute and began to blow a dismal tune, which I took to be a plaintive dirge for the dead and vegetable, so far as it conversed the venerable troglodyte, was closed, ventured to make a remark about that, but the mournful tones of his long yellow flute were the only reply I received. Returning to my horse, after I had ceased ing a way by which I could lead him down to the valley, I caught up my wayward spoon. The sounds of the flute followed me, and even after I had crossed the river, which the faithful horse swam like a duck, I could hear the melancholy wail of the old man's lugubrious features. I had not proceeded very far, after crossing the river, until I came to a large log house built one square on the side of a mountain. It was the first house I had seen for some time, and as I was not likely to see another one very soon, I determined that my horse to a sapling, and opened the rude gate with the intention of knocking at the door, when an enormous dog that looked more like a lion, bounded from behind an ash-hopper, and came at me with a roar. I sprang on to the fence and climbed up a grapevine depending from a tree, just in time, too, for when I ventured to look down there was the fierce gazing at me.

"You Boss!" yelled a voice, "come here, cuh. Don't pay no tention to him, stranger. He only wanted to skeer you a little."

He has succeeded," I replied, with a cut placing enough confidence in the man's explanation to trust myself to descend within reach of the dog.

"So was from that, I tell you, sah," throwing an iron wedge against the fence. The dog jumped down and trotted away, and I, thus assured of protection, left my pencil and joined the man in the yard.

"How do you do, sah?" said he, extending his hand.

"As well as a frightened man could well be," I replied.

"Well, he wouldn't hurt you even if he had gotten his mouth open. He's all gums, anyhow. He is gittin' along in years and has fit cousin till his teeth air about all gone. Come in."

I followed him into the house. In front of a small fire in a great fire-place sat a woman and a girl. They arose when we entered. The woman was not bad looking, and the girl was positively beautiful, with flaxing black eyes and hair as dark as the gathered gloom of midnight.

I told them my name, after which the man said: "My name is Redman Jeffries; this is my wife and this" with a wave of his hand, "is my daughter Lentie. Set down an' make yourself at home. I don't know your business or what you're after, but I reckon you'll tell us why you air in this here neighborhood, anyhow."

I told him that I was seeking health and that I thought I could find it among the mountains.

"That's what you show your sense, my frend," said he. "What is man but a bundle of ills? Why, I've been a-mowing his farm for nigh on fifty years, and I'm as much used to misery as the grasshopper is to the hot sun. I'm as well acquainted with misery as I am with my wife, and I'm as much acquainted with her as I am with my self. I'm as much acquainted with myself as I am with my self. I'm as much acquainted with myself as I am with my self. I'm as much acquainted with myself

LOCAL NEWS.

—Dr. C. H. Hubbard and wife, left this week for a winters sojourn in the city of Mexico.

Mince Meat, &c.

If you want some nice Cranberry Sauce, and Mince Meat, go to

J. W. ROGERS.

—The Paducah Planing Mill was destroyed by fire, Friday last. Loss $35,000. Insured for $14,000.

—Note Plaut's Removal.

—Dr. H. C. Buck and A. T. Wilson, have a hub factory at Harris Station, Tenn., an I will soon add machinery necessary to run a hoop factory.

—Hay Plaut Bros & Co's, you can find Burlaganes, the Watchmaker. His work has proved his reliability.

—Mr. R. B. Brevard, hardware merchant, will move his store into the Robinson block, late occupied by Holcombe's drug store, probably next week.

—Nice line of Rodger's Bro. Genuine Triple Plated SILVER WARE, warranted.

PLAUT BROS. & CO.

—The thermometer marked two degrees below zero yesterday at 7 A. M., and six below on Friday the 9th, the latter being the coldest day in Hickman this winter.

—Mr. Thos. Hall, of Fulton, has moved to Plaut Bros. & Co's.

—President Arthur has been compelled to reconsider his determination to visit the New Orleans Exposition during February. He hopes, however, to attend the Exposition as a private citizen after the expiration of his official term.

Notice!

All persons indebted to us will confer a favor by coming forward and settling accounts at once.

ALEXANDER & MAXWELL.

Jan. 9, 1885.

—The public roads are in a very bad condition to travel, being frozen on the surface and so muddy in some places, that it is with difficulty the horse plods his way.

PURE country made APPLE VINEGAR at Cowgill's Drug Store.

—For the last few days we have had several lively discussions on different subjects, and all of the participants remained in good humor. It is differences of opinion which produces thought. That is right boys, stand by your convictions.

—Hugh M. Saunders, wife and mother, arrived this morning. They have come to remain. We welcome them into our midst, and hope that their sojourn with us may be pleasant and profitable.—[Princeton Argus.

—Note one fact, hard times or good times, that the regular and live advertisers in the Hickman COURIER, always flourish like the green bay tree. This is an unanswerable argument, and a constant invitation to others, come and do likewise.

—Dresden, Tenn., has petitioned the Legislature to repeal all laws now in existence incorporating said town. They wish to be brought in under what is known as the "Four-Mile-Law," so as to prohibit the sale of liquors within one mile of the city.

—Mr Holly Turner, having sold the Luclede Hotel to Mr. Neff, of Kansas City, Mo., left Thursday morning for Paducah, which place he will make his future home. Mr. Neff has taken charge of the Luclede, and it is said has considerably improved that already popular establishment.

—Mr. C. A. Holcombe has moved into his new brick—the old Holcombe corner, and has decidedly the neatest and nicest arranged drug store in Western Kentucky. He looks "at home again" in his new corner, and being an expert and thoroughly qualified druggist, a bright business in the future for him.

—We regret to say that Mr. John Odom, who has been engaged here for some time in business, was compelled to make an assignment last week for the benefit of his creditors. We understand that the settlement will be made through Messrs. Swiggert and Moor, and that the assets will nearly cover the liabilities.—Union City Anchor.

—The report is current that the small-pox is raging in Cairo, from 20 to 30 deaths having occurred there from this loathsome disease. It is said that during the very cold weather that the bed clothing was taken from the pest house as a charity for some poor persons to use, and thus the disease spread. A very mistaken charity we should think.

—Another frightful asylum calamity is imminent at Kankakee, the Eastern Illinois Hospital for the Insane, at Kankakee. The asylum was totally destroyed, and the misery of the unfortunate inmates is pitiful to read of. Seventeen helpless lunatics were burned alive. The loss of life was actually due to a criminal lack of facilities, and the Legislature is bitterly denounced because of it.

—The World's Exposition at New Orleans is in a bad way. The U. S. Government loaned them one million dollars, and before the show is well under way all the money has been spent, and the concern $200,000 in debt. The employes threaten to strike, and a placard has been posted threatening to burn the Exposition buildings unless they are paid. The U. S. Commissioners demanded a showing of what had been done with the money.

The New York Sun very pertinently and justly remarks that the business troubles of the country began long before the election of a Democratic President, and when there was every prospect of a continuation of the Republican power. They originated in causes with which political parties have nothing to do, and they will terminate without regard to political influence.

—Industrial schools for girls are growing more popular and general. Heretofore, they have been confined to the cities, and for the most part a kind of charity movement, but now they are gradually extending out to small towns as a rule are no more competent to this work, thoroughly, than to manage their literary education without a teacher. Here's a field worth some good, live, energetic, progressive educated lady.

Never Give Up.

If you are suffering with low and depressed spirits, loss of appetite, general debility, disordered blood, weak constitution, headache, or any disease of a bilious nature by all means procure a bottle of Electric Bitters. You will be surprised how the rapid improvement that will follow you will be inspired with new life; strength and activity will return; pain and misery will cease, and henceforth you will rejoice in the praise of Electric Bitters. Sold at fifty cents a bottle at Moore & Landrum's Drug Store.

—Our reporter called at the court house yesterday in quest of news and obtained the following delightful sensational item, and if it causes anything like the excitement in our reader's minds that it was creating in court circles, we shall not regret its publication. It was as follows: "Dick Tyler and T. R. McMahan have locked horns over a game of drafts. Umpires, Judge R. S. Murrell and Sheriff W. A. Shuck; W. P. Taylor, manager and fireman; and A. C. Holmes, musical director." When officers and lawyers are thus at play, the people may continue to smile and be happy.

A Great Discovery

Mr. Wm. Thomas, of Newton, Ia., says: "My wife has been seriously afflicted with a cough for twenty-five years, and this spring more severely than ever before. She had used many remedies without relief, and being urged to try Dr. King's New Discovery, did so, with most gratifying results. The first bottle relieved her very much, and the second bottle has absolutely cured her. She has not had so good health for thirty years."

Trial Bottles Free at Moore & Landrum's Drug Store. Large Size $1.00.

—The Louisville Commercial says, "the creamery has come to Kentucky to stay," and further, that successful enterprises of this kind at Standford, Shelbyville, Lebanon and Georgetown. A prac tical dairyman, speaking of this section says, "they cannot be run successfully in localities where milk and cream command high prices. In this county the demand for milk and cream is larger than the supply. There are many farmers, however, who get more milk than they use, and have more cows than they mil:, a creamery establishment; could be profitable to such.

Bucklen's Arnica Salve.

THE BEST SALVE in the world for Cuts, Bruises, Sores Ulcers, Salt Rheum, Fever Sores, Tetter, Chapped Hands, Chilblains, Corns, and all Skin Eruptions, and positively cures Piles, or no pay required. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction, or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box. For Sale at MOORE & LANDRUM'S.

—On Tuesday last elections were held for U. S. Senator, with the following results:

New York—Wm. Evarts.
Indiana—Daniel Voorhees.
Arkansas—Election yet in progress.
Missouri—Geo. Vest.
Colorado—Sen'r. Teller.
Pennsylvania—Don Cameron.
N. Carolina—Z. B. Vnnce.
California—Liland Standford.
Florida—Wilkinson Call.
Connecticut—O. H. Platt.

—Mr. Alex. N. Taylor, editor of the Fulton Fultonian, was married, Wednesday the 21st instant, to Miss Laura J. Craig, the accomplished daughter of that veteran Democrat, J. H. Craig, of this county. We might write several columns of good wishes for the happy young couple, and then not express the boundless prosperity and happiness we really wish them. May all the blessings of life be theirs

—We suppose it is a settled fact in Madisonville now, that Colonel Zeno Young will be their next postmaster. He is thrice deserving of such preferment, and would, without question, fill the bill to perfection. He is a Democrat in the full acceptation of the term, has paid something for preaching what was in him, and we take it the office should be given to him as long as he sees fit to hold it.—[Henderson News.

—All apprehension of any present overflow is about passed. The river is receding at Hickman yesterday, but every indication is favorable for a fall on or about Saturday. All the upper rivers are falling, and the weather clear, sharp and cold everywhere. The break-up of this cold spell may, and doubtless will, bring another flood, but that is too far ahead to make any intelligent prediction about.

—Hickman corn buyers are paying 41c for sacked and shelled delivered at Hickman, and 35c in the ear. New Orleans quotations stand at 42c for yellow, and 50c for white, which leaves Hickman market at 41c, about 5 to 6 cents better than New Orleans.

—Itch, Prairie Mange, and Scratches of every kind cured in 30 minutes by WOOLFORD'S SANITARY LOTION. Use no other. This never fails.

Sold by J. W. COWGILL,
Druggist, Hickman, Ky.

LOWER and LOWER.

All kinds of Groceries—hams, sides, &c as cheap as the cheapest. I will not be undersold.

JOHN WESTON.

In the Light.

J. W. Rogers hopes his friends can see better than ever. That he will furnish groceries at the lowest prices delivered.

FOR STATE SENATOR.

Pleasing Compliments From the Press.

Mr. George Warren, editor of the Hickman COURIER, has been favorably mentioned as Senator in the Legislature in place of Mr. Vaughn, recently deceased. Every paper in his district handsomely endorses his candidature. We need such men as Mr. Warren in our Legislature—men of business and of brains. Did we send more such men to Frankfort our State would be in a better condition financially. It is a sad fact that a considerable majority of our average legislators can neither draft a bill nor comprehend its significance and effect after it is drafted.—Russellville Herald Enterprise.

The above comes from our able contemporary, the Hickman Courier, of which its editor, Geo. Warren, has been mentioned by the press of this district as a suitable man to fill the unexpired term in the Upper House of the General Assembly of Kentucky. While the unexpired time is quite short, and the remuneration very little, we cannot see how Mr. Warren, who is a consistent Democrat, can refuse to serve the people when called upon. He is so well known and has such a large circle of friends that a heated canvass would hardly be necessary. However, Mr. Warren does not say that he would not accept the position, and we don't believe he will decline to make the race. He can have the unexpired term if he likes and a second one also, without a great struggle.—[Fultonian.

Editor Warren, of the Hickman Courier, in response to the expression in several papers, intimates that if the people of his senatorial district want him as their State Senator, "Barkis is willin." We think they can do not find a more worthy man and certainly not a better qualified one. —[Standard.

The Monitor of last week had an article favoring Mr. George Warren, of Hickman, for State Senator to fill the unexpired term of Mr. Vaughan, deceased. There is no one in the district better qualified for the place than Mr. Warren, and if he wants it, there is no one whom we would rather see have it.—[Mayfield Democrat.

A Card.

The published proceedings of the City Council says that, "T. V. Wallace having failed to qualify and signified his intention not to qualify as City Marshal, on motion the office was declared vacant, &c." This is all proper and sufficient, no doubt, so far as the official deelsration of the Council is concerned, but feeling grateful to the public for having elected me City Marshal, I personally desire that public to know why I failed to qualify. I was elected City Marshal in August last, and in the meantime was appointed to the office of jailer, and finding that the law was positive in holding the two offices incompatible, I was compelled to decline one or the other, and chose to accept that of jailer. With thanks and gratitude to those who elected me Marshal, and to all others, I simply say I shall try and make them as good a jailer as I know how. T. V. WALLACE.

Away from Home and Friends.

From Chicago Democrat.]

A peripatetic individual named D. T. Thompson died on Mr. Dick Griffey's place last Thursday. Mr. Griffey found him in a dying condition in an old log hut near the M. & O. R. R., and had him moved into a more comfortable position and afforded him every assistance possible, but to no purpose. Papers on the person of the dead man disclosed his name, and the further intelligence that he had two children with a man named Hockaday, at Humboldt, Tenn.; one with a man named Albritton, at Cayce Station, Fulton county, and one with a Rev. Geo. W. Flowers, at Columbus. Thompson was altogether impecunious and his remains were buried by the county.

ONCE AGAIN,

We would say to you, that you should not neglect the opportunity of a little time, by saving something in the lines of choice goods, which we are closing at prime cost.

We have added Blankets, Comforts, and Cardigan Jackets to the list, which with Overcoats, Clothing, and Winter Boots and Shoes, make quite a formidable array.

It would pay you, even if you do not need any of these goods at present, to buy and lay away for future use. Here you may secure an opportunity of the kind again.

Money saved, is money made, and it would prove a most profitable investment for you. Try us once.

ALEXANDER & MAXWELL.

February Predictions.

Those curious about the coming weather may note these predictions, for the month of February. They are based on scientific science:

1st and 2nd, damp and foggy, growing more inclement and colder to the 7th.

7th to 12th, milder and more pleasant, rain, and perhaps thunder storms.

13th to 19th, seasonable weather, with increasing cold and North and Northwest winds.

19th to 31st, stormy and unsettled.

PERHAPS it is called the "upper crust" because you have to pass it to get to the real meat and strength of society.

The Kentucky Railroad Commission.

In a discussion of the Inter-State Commerce Bill by the Senate Friday last, Senator Williams of Kentucky, had the following with regard to the Kentucky Railroad Commission:

I confess that the inclinations of my own mind are in favor of a commission. We had a commission in my own State partly through my instrumentality. The roads had all sorts of rates and extortionate charges. The commission was appointed merely with a supervisory power, and the very first year of its existence the roads all came to terms, not by any coercion, but they got together and settled their lines and freights upon such terms of equity and justice, that the people were satisfied. They reduced the maximum charges upon all the roads to three cents a mile for passenger travel, and some of them carried for much less, and upon coal and other heavy commodities the charge was reduced so as to divide traffic in grain and coal and mineshroughout the State everywhere along the line of the roads. Now, why can not that be done! But after the first year the roads got over their fear and nothing else has been done, and the commission is not now worth a cent.

Married.

In Fulton, Wednesday evening the 21st, Mr. Alex. N. Taylor, to Miss Laura J Craig.

In the County, on the 21st, Mr. Jeff Davis to Miss Nannie S. Roper.

On the 21st, at the residence of the brides father, Mr. John Stubbs, by Rev. Mr. Hedley, Mr. G. W. Newton to Miss Mattie F. Stubbs.

Here's a trio of happy marriages, the brides and bridegroom as of the best families of Fulton county, all embarking on the sea matrimonial on the same day with the buoyant hopes of youth and love's expectations. May their every hope be realized. Let the brides ever honor and respect their husbands, and the bridegrooms ever hold themselves worthy of that respect, and all will be well. Never cease to court each others respect and affection as ardently as each do today, and happiness and prosperity will be bound to follow.

COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS

HICKMAN, Ky., Jan. 20th, 1885.

Council met. Present Mayor Cowgill, Councilmen Beckman, Bennett, Moore, Case, Ramage and Witting.

The minutes of the last meeting were read, approved and signed.

ACCOUNTS ALLOWED

The following accounts were presented, properly approved, and on motion, were ordered paid:

E. T. Gardner, ..... 90
French & Plummer, coal ..... $5 00

CITY ATTORNEY.

On motion the City Clerk was given further time in the matter of City Attorney.

SCHOOL PATRONAGE.

R E Miller, City Clerk, presented his official bond, with A. A Faris as surety

W. L. Mcfatchen presented his bonds as Treasurer, with L. L. Underwood and W. H. Jackson, sureties.

G. M Wilburn, City Marshal, presented his bond, with E. Case and T. F. Wilburn, as sureties.

On motion, said bonds were received, approved and spread upon the record, whereupon said officers were duly sworn in by Mayor Cowgill.

LETTER TO J. W. THOMAS.

On motion, ordered that Mayor Cowgill address a letter to be signed by the Council, to Maj J. W. Thomas, of the N. C. & St. L. R. R. in regard to the time and manner trains are run to and from Hickman.

PLACED UPON ASSESSORS BOOK

On motion ordered that the Assessor place upon the Assessors book for taxation all property laid off into lots in East Hickman.

CEMETERY ROAD

On motion, any action in regard to the Cemetery gravel road be deferred until next meeting.

FIRE INSPECTIONS.

On motion, Mayor Cowgill appointed G. M. Wilburn, City fire inspector, and he is hereby ordered to proceed immediately to perform that duty.

On motion Council adjourned,

R. E MILLET, C. C.

No Fun in Being a Princess.

The position of the Princess of Wales is too exalted a one to permit a much social enjoyment, yet has not the splendor of royalty its drawbacks? Why, The Princess too, is peculiarly unsteadisations, and evidently finds the magnificent loneliness of her position an actual trial. To be young and beautiful, and idolized, and yet to be shut out from most forms of social amusement, can be no means delightful. Yet, there are, of course, very few homes, even among those of the highest nobility, to which the Princess of Wales can go as an invited guest. And, when she does, she is surrounded by more than her ordinary state. Evidently ungenial to the head has the same original meaning. Even in certain European ranges the relation between the two has been reversed, as by Punch, who remarks that "unshaking in Spain is prudent to our taking off the hat." Dean Hume, it seems that removal of the remainder of the waiters may take a turn, but as soon as she stands up again they must stop. This solitary Grand Lama kind of performance can not be very amusing to this kindly, gentle, amiable lady. She is, I am told, a most accomplished dancer, despite her slight lameness. But, of all the recreations of her life, she most enjoys driving in the park. In her little victoria, with its coachman in scarlet and gold, and its footman in powder, and no one but the gracious smile and bow wherewith she returns every salutation can doubt her delight at her own popularity.

A STATE numerously inhabited, but not on the map—the state of suspense.

THE original languages of Italy were many, the Latin dialect being spoken on the lowlands of the Tiber, and in time becoming the official language of the empire. The Germans conquered Italy and Latin ceased to be the official language; it ceased to be written, and it ceased to be taught, although it continued to be spoken. But in its best days it was more a written than a spoken language, confined chiefly to the learned, the orators and poets, and to legal documents, the common people speaking a mixed dialect called the Romana rustica, or country Latin, and it is from this, and not from the classic Latin, that Italian is claimed by some not well-informed writers to have been derived.

IT IS EASY

TO MAKE BIG CLAIMS in print, to say my Furniture "is the best," requires but a stroke of the pen and a little printer's ink; to back up the claim with the proof is a more difficult matter. None of my would-be rivals ever dare attempt to show in what respect their goods are "the best." "Not this evening, some other evening," is what they say when asked to giveany solid reason for their claim, that they keep "the best" goods. This is a good way for people who keep inferior goods and wish to make them go by "blowing," but it is not my way.

QUALITY

is the thing that tells, and I propose to duplicate LOW PRICES with first-class Goods. This is the point and essence of this discourse, and makes horse sense instead of mere blowing about it. Perhaps you know what good FURNITURE is, and perhaps you don't; if you want the best give me a call and I will show you.

I am also agent for the light-running Diamond Sewing Machine, the ladies friend.

N. B.—I also have the best stock of Undertaker's Goods, and will duplicate LOW PRICES. Customers politely served on short notice. Store across the street from Holcombe's new drug store.

Respectfully,
E. T. GARDNER.

Moore & Landrum,

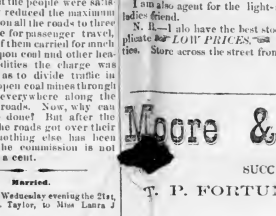
SUCCESSORS TO
T. P. FORTUNE & COMPANY.



DEALERS IN
DRUGS, MEDICINES, BOOKS, STATIONARY, and School Supplies.
Fancy GOODS, TOYS, and PICTURES, DRUGGISTS SUNDRIES, PAINTS, OILS, &c.
AGENTS FOR THE WHITE SEWING MACHINE.
WINES AND LIQUORS FOR MEDICAL USE.

R. L. MOORE can be found at Dr FARIS' Office, to attend night calls at Moore & Landrum's.

PRESCRIPTIONS A SPECIALTY.

HERTWECK, BALTZER & CO.

MANUFACTURERS OF

WA[illegible]ONS,

Hickman, Kentucky.

THE OLD RELIABLE
CHAS. A. HOLCOMBE, —DEALER IN—

DRUGS, MEDICINES, PAINTS AND DYE-STUFFS,

HICKMAN, KY.

PRESCRIPTIONS CAREFULLY COMPOUNDED!

A Hint for Men.

The conquered man, prostrate before his conqueror, and becoming himself a possession, simultaneously loses possession of whatever thing he has about him, and, therefore surrendering his weapon, he also yields up, if the victor demands it, whatever part o his dress is worth taking. Hence the nakedness, partial or complete, of the captive, becomes additional evidence of his subjugation. . . . In Abyssinia conquerors leave their bodies down to the girdle in the presence of persons; but to equals the corner of the cloth is removed only for a time. The like occurs in Polynesia. The Tahitians uncover the body as low as the waist in the presence of the King; and in the Society Isles generally the lower ranks of people, by way of respect, strip off their upper garments in the presence of their principal chiefs. . . . Evidently uncovering the head has the same original meaning. Even in certain European ranges the relation between the two has been reversed, as by Punch, who remarks that "unshaking in Spain is prudent to our taking off the hat." Dean Hume, it seems that removal of the remainder of the waiters may take among European people, often restrained among ourselves to bowing the hat is a remnant of that process of unclothing himself, by which, in early times, we rendered ourselves incapable of using up all he had.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

Temperance.

We meant to have said something on the subject of temperance last week, when the matter was first brought up. But perhaps it is not too late now. Temperance is something that is destined to play an important part in the future of this country, for although it has been referred to incidentally by a great number of persons in times past, it is only lately that people have found out there was any money in it. A few years ago a man could open a saloon and wealth would pour in upon him, as the profit on a drink of whisky or beer was three hundred per cent., but a temperance lecturer could not make his salt. But now this has all changed. There is no much competition in the saloon business, and prices and taxes are figured so close that only a few saloon keepers clear a cent at the end of the year, while temperance lecturers, especially if they have been star drunkards sometime, can rake in their two hundred dollars a night and lay up half of it against a day of sickness or trouble or a relapse. It will be seen, therefore, that temperance has made rapid strides during the last few years, and in the future is bright with promise. Another thing is that as long as there was a sort of stigma resting on the profession of whisky selling, and men who dealt out the "liquid damnation to posion their fellow men," drinking was as popular and a great many drank because it was cunning, and they felt they were doing a cute thing to break away from the law that was making it become open, and sanctioned by the law and liquor sellers are elected to office and considered as good as anybody, people do not care so much about drinking. There is no longer any fun in it, and it has fallen into disfavor, or rather into disuse, and has become unpopular. On the other hand temperance has come up from almost nothing, and is now the best business a man can go into, and a field is thus opened for the industrious youth of our land to gain a start in life when all other avenues to fortune seemed closed. All that is needed is for law to make it illegal to talk temperance and give liquor sellers the freest range, and there would be such a wave of temperance sweep over this country as would make saloon-keepers look sick. The law has too long been on the side of whisky-selling, and it is time it was changed and the temperance people given a chance.—Milwaukee Sun.

AMERICAN journalism is rich in names. For instance, there is the Fairplay (Colorado) Flume; the Dakota Blizzard, the Solid Muldoon, of Ouray, Colorado; the Tombstone Epitaph, of Nevada; the Simplecute, of Texas, and the Bazoo, of Missouri.

GREAT
CLOSING OUT SALE.

Balance of our heavy Winter Goods, previous to Stock taking. We are determined to reduce our

Heavy Winter Goods

therefore we must sell cheaper than any other house in the city. Because we have the largest Stock and can afford to sacrifice what we do not wish to carry over. A full line of winter Goods, fresh and new at a sacrifice. Come and see for yourself and supply your wants while opportunity favors you.

PLAUT BROS. & CO.,

IN NEW BRICK ON CORNER PLANTER'S HOTEL LOT.

Who Made the Low Prices?

—OF—

Furniture!

We announce to our friends and the public generally, that we have just received a large and complete stock of all kinds of Furniture and solicit the trade of parties wishing to buy. We can show all styles of Furniture in plain and fancy. Also, a few line of ## Undertaker's Goods.

We propose to make our prices to suit the spirit of the times. You can rest assured you need never leave our house to look for cheaper goods. We propose to sell as low as any retail Furniture store in the Purchase.

Very respectfully,
T. F. WILBURN & CO.

We are manufacturing new Odd Fellows building.

All kinds of Repairing done on short notice, and in a workmanship style. Also we are prepared to give special Inducements as Contractors and Builders of Houses.

BARGAINS.

Our Stock is complete in all lines, and we will sell very low our Goods bought of us.

DRY GOODS, SHOES,
BOOTS, CLOTHING,
HATS, CAPS, CARPETS
AND OIL CLOTHS
WINDOW CURTAINS
AND WINDOW SHADES,
GROCERIES, QUEENSWARE,
GLASSWARE, DOORS, SASH
BLINDS, OIL PAINTS &c

We respectfully invite all to call and examine our STOCK before purchasing elsewhere.

J. AMBERG'S SONS.

J. W. COWGILL,

DEALER IN

DRUGS, PATENT MEDICINES AND TOILET ARTICLES &c., &c., &c.

NEW HOME SEWING MACHINES

Trusses AND Abdominal Supp[illegible] PAINTS AND OILS &c., &c., &c.

Prescriptions filled at any hour, day or night. Ring night bell after 10 o'clock.

RELIABLE.

The old, popular and always reliable Hardware house of

R. B. BREVARD,

Has a splendid stock of the very best makes of all kinds of Hardware which are offered at

ONE PRICE,

and that the very lowest the market justifies. All goods guaranteed to be exactly as represented.

ROOFING.

The best roof for the least money. Experienced workmen employed. The attention of builders especially desired as this house will give special inducements. Correspondence solicited.

R. B. BREVARD

THE HICKMAN COURIER.

WHAT BENEFIT WILL IT BE?

Wherein will a new Constitution benefit the people of Kentucky, is a question frequently asked. We answer, gives no opportunity to accomplish many reforms, economical and otherwise, which cannot be accomplished under the present State Constitution. Whether the Constitution would be thus improved is a risk the people take in voting for it. Some of the reforms that might be accomplished are:

1st. Restricting the meetings of the Legislature to once in four years, unless called in certain emergencies by the Governor.

2nd. Abolishing the office of County Tax Assessor, and having tax assessments made by the Magistrates of each civil precinct, and collected by the constables.

3rd. A clause prohibiting towns and counties from voting railroad and other taxes.

4th. Positively interdicting the Legislature from making private and local laws, and forcing all such business into the County and Circuit Courts. These are some of the points that a change would prove beneficial, which would be worth thousands and thousands of dollars to the people of Kentucky.

The Governor of Tennessee shows, in his message, that during the past two years the State expenses have been less than the revenues by over $600,000.—Louisville Commercial.

The COURIER is not in love with Gov. Bate's message in so far as he boasts of throwing the burden of his convict labor wagons and furniture on the people of friendly sister States; but, the economic feature of Tennessee keeping her expenses less than her revenue, certainly affords a lesson that Kentucky and other States might study with profit. Kentucky has been free of debt so long, and Kentuckians have borne themselves so proudly in comparison with the people of debt burdened States, that the mere semblance of an accumulating State debt wounds the pride almost as sensitively as the pocket books of our people. It is the old, old story of living beyond one's income. Tennessee learned the lesson of economy through the bitter burden of an enormous State debt. Will Kentucky learn it through example, or through actual oppression.

BALLARD county lets out the keeping of her paupers to the lowest bidder, and the Wickliffe Journal, the county seat, criticises the action of the county authorities with severity, and in so doing is supported by the Padneah News and the Paducah Standard, and the comments of these papers will be seconded by the better feelings of humanity everywhere. We believe in economy, close and rigid, but we have no patience with this simulation of christian philanthropy that starves and punishes the poor unfortunates that are cast upon the charity of the county or State. The Journal describes the keeping of the Ballard county poor as "wretched and squalid." It is cheap in newspapers to work up sympathy for these unfortunates, and we know also that county authorities are often greatly imposed upon by charges for pauper, and persons put upon the county as paupers who ought not to be, and hence the utmost vigilance ought to be observed, but when worthy unfortunates are accepted as paupers, they ought to be treated as human beings, and properly cared for.

But it seems that it is the people who elect the Representatives that burden them with these bills, and, every man having an ax to grind, the poor Rep. is compelled to turn the axle or be relegated to the eternal how-wows at the next election. We must have a change among the people, if we cannot elect men with enough backbone to tell them to go to the county courts with their little bills, before we may expect an improved Legislature.—[Covington Commonwealth.

Nine-tenths of these local bills are of no earthly benefit to any one except the individuals incorporated, and every right and privilege they need can be obtained through the county courts by paying the costs of the procedure therein. These local bills consume two-third of the time of every Legislature, not only taking precedence, but excluding the consideration of general legislation. The most that could be asked of a candidate would be to favor a rule limiting or excluding such legislation; and failing in that to favor a rule compelling precedence in the consideration of general legislation; and failing in these efforts, himself, then to go to work and get all the local bills his people need passed.

Secure your liberty poles now. The liberty season is approaching and the price of poles, as well as the poles themselves, will soon be going up. A tall pole, and eternal vigilance while putting it up, is the price of liberty this year.

$1,000,000 Behind.

The State of Illinois is not only out of debt, but has a clear surplus of $3,000,000. The State of Kentucky not many years ago was in the same condition; but where is that surplus now? It has climbed down steadily and commenced to go up on the other side. About the time the next Legislature meets a debt of nearly $1,000,000 will be discovered if some intelligent diligence is exercised to find it out in a well.—Louisville Commercial.

It is true but not many years ago Kentucky was out of debt, and had a surplus in the treasury; and it is also true that the State is now in debt, and has not a dollar surplus in the treasury. The COURIER has assumed that this unfortunate financial condition was caused by lack of economy, but it seems to be in the air that there is something worse behind than mere lack of economy. We hear this talk of vested officials shielding and aiding a true statement of the States financial condition, and bold intimations of "big discrepancies," defalcations, &c. Every honest citizen irrespective of party, should be in favor of probing to the bottom of these charges, and let the truth come out. If there's anything rotten, let it be found; and let the guilty be punished.

The Kentucky Railroad Commission

The Inter-State Commerce Bill was then taken up. Mr. Williams strongly opposed the railroad practice of charging more for short hauls than for longer ones. He favored the Commission Bill, but admitted since the first year's operation of the Kentucky State Commission it had done nothing, and was now not worth a cent.—[Courier-Journal.

The Kentucky Commission is composed of capable, honest gentlemen, and we have confidence would answer any grievance of the people within the scope of their authority. The Kentucky Commission is what is called advisory, and not mandatory; and perhaps if it ever does much good it should have somewhat more of the mandatory.

Why does the editor of the Hickman COURIER persist in calling this paper the "Paducah Sentinel." Certainly there is no harm done, but were we would just like to know "the why ness of the wherefore."—Paducah Standard.

An inadvertence, neighbor, for certainly there is no exchange received at this office that is more heartily welcomed than the excellent, newsy, and well edited Paducah Standard.

IT was a unanimous and patriotic act to see the excelled Senators and Congressmen voting for the relief of the great Union General, Grant, in his present misfortunes; and while such legislation is a wrong precedent, the Southern people in this instance, will justify the vote.

OLD man Mike Dolan, in jail at Nashville, under sentence of death for the murder of his wife, has been relieved of the charge by the deathbed confession of the real murderer. He was convicted on circumstantial evidence altogether.

KENTUCKY wants and needs a new capitol building, but won't get it for some years yet. The people are not in a mood to justify any such large expenditure at this time.

BARNUM proposes to make a show of Gen. Grant's war trophies and presents, and will pay the General $100,000 for their use for this purpose and a per centage of the receipts. This a good trade.

Gen. McClelland will be grand marshal of the Cleveland inauguration procession, Gen. Hancock having declined on account of the death of his son. Rooms on the first floor along the line of march on inauguration day command $200 to $300, and those higher up are held at $10 to $20, while $1 per head is charged for windows from which to watch the procession.

EX-Gov. St. John says: "The whole story to the effect that I have received a single penny, promise or promise from the Democratic or any other party, in connection with the campaign, is infamously and maliciously false."

Decreased Cost of Living.

Tables prepared by the American Grocer, New York, show a much greater decrease within a few years in the cost of many of the necessaries of life than is generally supposed. A few articles are selected for example. The comparison is on wholesale prices:

| | 1870 | 1884 |
|---|---|---|
| Sugar, fair to good | 9¾ | 5.5 16 |
| crushed | 14¾ | 6¾ |
| Coffee, fair Rio | 17¾ | 9¾ |
| Tea, good mixed Japan | 57 | 20 |
| Mess Pork | $ 20 88 | $12 75 |
| Lard | 15 12 | 6 80 |
| Wheat | 1 20½ | 85 |
| Flour, extra State | 5 50 | 3 90 |

Any is not at all decay; it is the ripening, the swelling of the fresh life within that withers and bursts the husk.

A SENSATION.

Astounding Developments Intimated

HAS KENTUCKY BEEN ROBBED!

"One important matter in electing members of the next Legislature should be a close scrutiny into the expenses of our last government. We have no demagogical plea that officers are paid too high salaries though in some instances they may be, but we expect that there is a leakage elsewhere. One thing is certain, that our State taxes are increasing, our State debt is increasing, and we have an idea that if everything had been managed with proper economy there would have been no necessity for this condition of affairs. What say the Democratic press of the State?"—Hickman Courier.

We agree with the Courier to a dot. It has long been a mystery to us why Kentucky with no bonded debt should be continually in a financial strait. There must be mismanagement somewhere. Only a few weeks ago a gentleman on the inside intimated to us that we need not be surprised to hear of startling developments in the management of the State's affairs at any time. He said he could tell a tale one sentence in length, and that sentence concluding not more than three words, which would astound every citizen in the Commonwealth. The gentleman referred to is a Democrat. He has been on all his life. He is no alarmist. His word is as good as his oath. Now what did he mean? Have the vaults of the State been robbed? Have important records been despoiled? Has any one defaulted? Have our State officials been extravagant in the use of the public funds? Have our Legislatures misappropriated the people's money? Or what is the matter? There is evidently a screw loose somewhere. Perhaps be the words of our Democratic friend, though we hope when all is told things will not be as bad as his alarming expression would seem as far as our education is concerned. Twenty per cent. of the adult population of our State are unable to write their names, fifty-four fifth now of women that we meet upon the streets and highways are unable to write their names or to read the papers of this District, but by the Frankfort papers, and the papers generally throughout the State; but, the COURIER only suspected unnecessary leakages, or lack of proper economies, as the cause of the shortage in our State finances, and we cannot yet admit any other cause, except "spending more than we make." But, the Owensboro man, whom the Messenger endorses as a good Democrat—no alarmist, whose word is as good as his bond, &c., claims knowledge of astounding facts as to our State's financial embarrassments. But for the Messenger's high endorsement of this Owensboro Democrat, we should be inclined to dismiss his imputations as sensational and himself as an alarmist; but with the Messenger's endorsement, we would be more cautious. There are Democrats about Owensboro who have been close up to the public crib—inside, so to speak, and may know more than we wot of. If so, being an honest man, it is a crime to conceal such important facts. The Messenger should subject this Owensboro man to a plain and direct interview, and if he persists in holding his great secret, publish his name to the world, and let him shoulder the responsibility of such concealment and complicity. We can conceive of no justification for withholding such revealments except complicity in the crime.

But, we repeat, we cannot accept the suspicion that the State has been robbed, or that important State officials are defaulters, for aside from proper confidence in the integrity and honor of our State officials, the people know to a cent the amount of revenue collected, and the amount expended; but, with all this confidence no party prejudice shall blind us to facts if they can be produced. States have been robbed, officials enjoying the highest confidence of the people have defaulted, and such things come now and then like thunderbolts from a clear sky, and this is that gives countenance to the imputations made by this Owensboro Democrat.

Without a Newspaper.

(Waverly News.)

Nothing presents a sadder commentary upon the present condition of society than the large number of families, both in town and in the country, but more especially in the latter, that subscribe for no paper. Hundreds and thousands of families are thus growing up utterly ignorant of what is transpiring in the world around them—ignorant of the mighty events of the day. But who can tell the vastamount of injury that is being inflicted upon this young generation, those who are to fill our places in a busy world at no distant day, growing up without knowledge of the present or any study of the past this ignorance too, being imbued into them by sanction of who should and doubtless do know better, they can only think of the injurious effect of their insane course. Let the head of every family think of this, and place in the hands of those who we are responsible for, the means of acquiring some knowledge of the moving panorama in which we set our different parts.

5c CIGARS—three for a dime, at MOOKE & LANDRUM'S.

Compulsory Education.

From the official "organ" of the Teachers' State Association we quote the following report of its committee on compulsory education. The "report was enthusiastically adopted without discussion." At least the "organ" says so. The report is fearfully and wonderfully constructed. Here it is:

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON COMPULSORY EDUCATION.

We, your committee, to whom was referred the subject of "Compulsory Education," beg leave to submit the following:

That we believe that the time has come in the history of our State that there should be statutory enactment by our Legislature, having for its object the education of every boy and girl of our Commonwealth.

We, as Kentuckians, are proud of our great State, one which is great in many things which go to make a great and prosperous people. We have a territory great in extent, that seven of her sisters are required to hold her in position among the constellation of States, a State rich in developed and undeveloped resources, with great cities, fine towns, villages, productive farms, and magnificent homes. Our horses are the best of the world, our cattle the most chivalrous of earth, and our women are the most beautiful and accomplished that an infinite Deity ever saw proper to create.

Yet, with all this greatness, we find our State in the background of the educational world. Kentucky was admitted in to the Union in the year 1792, nearly a century ago, the second State admitted after the adoption of the Federal Constitution. Notwithstanding all our greatness as a part of the Federal Union, our more than 1,000,000 citizens, and more than half a million boys and girls that in a few years are to be our men and women of our Commonwealth, we have a most lamentable condition as far as our education is concerned. Twenty per cent. of the adult population of our State are unable to write their names, fifty-four fifth now of women that we meet upon the streets and highways are unable to write their names or to read the papers of this District, but by the Frankfort papers, and the papers generally throughout the State; but, the COURIER only suspected unnecessary leakages, or lack of proper economies, as the cause of the shortage in our State finances, and we cannot yet admit any other cause, except "spending more than we make." But, the Owensboro man, whom the Messenger endorses as a good Democrat—no alarmist, whose word is as good as his bond, &c., claims knowledge of astounding facts as to our State's financial embarrassments. But for the Messenger's high endorsement of this Owensboro Democrat, we should be inclined to dismiss his imputations as sensational and himself as an alarmist; but with the Messenger's endorsement, we would be more cautious. There are Democrats about Owensboro who have been close up to the public crib—inside, so to speak, and may know more than we wot of. If so, being an honest man, it is a crime to conceal such important facts. The Messenger should subject this Owensboro man to a plain and direct interview, and if he persists in holding his great secret, publish his name to the world, and let him shoulder the responsibility of such concealment and complicity. We can conceive of no justification for withholding such revealments except complicity in the crime.

But, we repeat, we cannot accept the suspicion that the State has been robbed, or that important State officials are defaulters, for aside from proper confidence in the integrity and honor of our State officials, the people know to a cent the amount of revenue collected, and the amount expended; but, with all this confidence no party prejudice shall blind us to facts if they can be produced. States have been robbed, officials enjoying the highest confidence of the people have defaulted, and such things come now and then like thunderbolts from a clear sky, and this is that gives countenance to the imputations made by this Owensboro Democrat.

W. W. RICHESON,
R. E. HARRISON,
J. I. GLENN,
T. HUNTER,
J. C. MAGILL,
} Committee.

A Singular Case.

CAIRO, ILL., Jan. 17.—A Singular case is reported from the town of Hampton, Ky., in Livingston county. George Moxley, a prominent and wealthy citizen of the county, while quietly resting in his parlor Wednesday afternoon suddenly became wild, and with frightful shrieks threw himself upon the floor, rolling over and over, then bounding to his feet and with an iron poker began to demolish the furniture, stoves, windows, everything which came in his way. Then while emitting most blood curdling howls and cries his wife, in a paroxysm of fright, called in a neighbor, William Fleming and others, who found the maniac entirely unde, having torn his clothing to tatters, casting it into the fire, and as they approached he threw himself upon all rooms and rushed at them with threats and howls. He was captured finally, but broke the ropes as though they were pieces of cotton cord. The stout men finally secured the poor victim, who lingered until last night, when death relieved him. The neighborhood is quiet and decided